

Labial reduction and correction

The size and appearance of the inner labia varies from woman to woman. Sometimes one is much larger than the other, or both may seem large and cause embarrassment.

Long labia may also produce chaffing and discomfort.

It is possible to reduce or equalize the labia via the newest techniques, thereby reducing discomfort as well as improving the cosmetic appearance.

The operation is done under general anaesthesia. It may be done as a day case, or with an over-night stay in hospital.